People Leader Completes Company's Lead Team

NEW YORK, March 1, 2023 /PRNewswire/ -- Peloton (NASDAQ: PTON), the leading connected fitness platform, today announced the appointment of Dalana Brand as Peloton's Chief People Officer (CPO), effective March 13, 2023. As a seasoned executive with significant global leadership experience in multiple industries, Brand joins the team with a strong reputation for organizational transformation. She will report to CEO Barry McCarthy and serve as a member of the leadership team, leading the company's Global People Team.

"Talent density has been a top priority for me at Peloton. Dalana's addition is the culmination of that strategy, rounding out and completing the leadership team," said McCarthy. "As we continue Peloton's transformation and pivot to growth, her vision and leadership will be critical to our success."

Brand previously served as Chief People and Diversity Officer at Twitter, where she led the company's global workforce and accelerated the progress to create an inclusive people experience. She joined the team in 2018, serving as Vice President of People Experience and Head of Inclusion & Diversity. Before joining Twitter, Brand was Vice President of Total Rewards for Electronic Arts and previously held senior leadership positions at the Whirlpool Corporation.

"I've made a career out of fostering inclusive employee experiences and leading with transparency and accountability," said Brand. "I'm thrilled to join the team at Peloton as the company continues striving to make fitness accessible for all."

Brand is relocating from California and will be based in New York City.
